The first promo video for Season

6 of Supernatural premiered Thursday night and it's got fans jazzed up for the show's return. When last we left Dean, he had just lost his brother. He wanted nothing more than to search high and low for a way to break Sam out of the box, but alas he had promised his little brother that he wouldn't. Instead, Sam made Dean promise to go and have a "normal" life. That translated to Dean ending up on Lisa's front porch, being welcomed into her and her son Ben's life and Sam was left in Lucifer's cage down in Hell.

As we begin Season 6, according to the promo video, Dean has been living with Lisa serving as a father figure for Ben. He seems to have settled into domesticity and even has a pick-up truck that he takes to his job. I know, I know, the shock is still wearing off for me. Dean Winchester, family man? Who would have thought? Plus, the lovely Impala is strikingly absent from the scene.

What's not absent, though, is Sammy. It seems that he's been back a while without Dean's knowledge. Add to that, his time away hasn't diminished his hunting skills at all! Dean seems suitably shocked that his brother has been roaming the Earth with Dean none-the-wiser. But like we all knew would happen, even when the Winchesters try to leave the evil ghosts and demons behind, they come calling regardless. And so Dean is brought back into the hunt to protect the family that he's created.

Will Dean and Sam return to the road and get back to basics with killing some supernatural creatures? Or will the draw of Dean's created family be too much and make him a homebody? Well, one outcome makes more sense than the other, but we'll have to wait until September 24th to find out. Tune in for the shocking Winchester reunion!
